

Personal Walls Evaluation: Compromise

By now, you have completed the Walls Assessment, and you're ready to begin addressing one of the faith barriers that all of us face in life. Compromise can be defined as the willingness to forsake that which is right and good in exchange for something of less value to God. But the great news is that, like any of the walls you may face, you can experience a Faith Breakthrough by focusing on who God is, and what He promises us!

The tools available at Faithbreakthroughs.com and in the Vision Center at BBC are in place to help you address and overcome the wall you are facing. As you embark on this journey, remember three important questions that are essential to your Faith Breakthrough:

When you ask the question "Who is God?" in light of the Compromise Wall, remember that the Scripture tells us He is Holy and Righteous. Study 1 Peter 1:15 and Leviticus 19:2 to learn more about the implications of these attributes of God's character. What do these verses tell us about God?

When you ask the question "What is True?" in light of the Compromise Wall, you find that God's nature has caused Him to make incredible promises to us. Study 1 Corinthians 10:13 and Ezekiel 36:26 to discover more about these promises. What has God promised YOU?

To dig deeper, search for key words in Scripture, such as these related to your wall: rebel, sin, compromise, forsake, disobey. This is best done by using a concordance – a fancy word for a keyword search tool for the Bible. You can even use a topical Bible tool to search for topics in the Bible – even if the actual word doesn't appear. For example, you might find a great verse on rebellion, but another word for rebellion is used.

When you ask the question, “Why am I here?” in light of the Compromise Wall, you find that there are certain steps of faith that will go hand in hand with believing the promises God has given you. Given the promises you have already read in Scripture, what steps do you need to take to walk in – and experience the blessing of – those promises?

Sharing God’s Promises: You will come to a place in your journey where you will be challenged to share what God has done – and is doing – with others as you celebrate the victory over your Wall. Consider the following as idea starters:

When breaking through a Wall of Compromise, consider sharing an intentional, ongoing conversation with a trusted friend. Once you have shared what God is doing, ask him or her to meet with you regularly, and remind you about the wonderful commitments you have made. Celebrate regularly the good things that come out of choosing God’s way instead of the old way! Focus on the blessings of the promise more than the curses of the compromise, lest you find yourself focused on past regrets rather than future opportunities.

You’ve taken a major step in beginning the process toward your Faith Breakthrough by completing this assessment. Congratulations on your willingness to begin the exciting journey!
