

Personal Walls Evaluation: Isolation

By now, you have completed the Walls Assessment, and you're ready to begin addressing one of the faith barriers that all of us face in life. Isolation can be defined as an intentional withdrawal from relationships to avoid pain or responsibility. But the great news is that, like any of the walls you may face, you can experience a Faith Breakthrough by focusing on who God is, and what He promises us!

The tools available at Faithbreakthroughs.com and in the Vision Center at BBC are in place to help you address and overcome the wall you are facing. As you embark on this journey, remember three important questions that are essential to your Faith Breakthrough:

When you ask the question "Who is God?" in light of the Isolation Wall, remember that the Scripture tells us God is Loving. Study 1 John 4:8 to learn more about the implications of these attributes of God's character. What does this verse tell us about God?

When you ask the question "What is True?" in light of the Isolation Wall, you find that God's nature has caused Him to make incredible promises to us. Study Galatians 5:22-23 and Psalms 133:1 to discover more about these promises. What has God promised YOU?

To dig deeper, search for key words in Scripture, such as these related to your wall: isolation, alone, aloof, withdrawal, hide. This is best done by using a concordance – a fancy word for a keyword search tool for the Bible. You can even use a topical Bible tool to search for topics in the Bible – even if the actual word doesn't appear. For example, you might find a great verse on Isolation, but another word for Isolation is used.

When you ask the question “Why am I Here?” in light of the Isolation Wall, you find that there are certain steps of faith that will go hand in hand with believing the promises God has given you. Given the promises you have already read in Scripture, what steps do you need to take to walk in – and experience the blessing of – those promises?

Sharing God’s Promises: You will come to a place in your journey where you will be challenged to share what God has done – and is doing – with others as you celebrate the victory over your Wall. Consider the following as idea starters:

When breaking through a Wall of Isolation, it is especially important not share in a way that doesn’t create unrealistic expectation that those present are expected to be in “instant relationship” with you. On the contrary, you are moving toward a path of deeper, more meaningful relationships that take time and investment. Consider a small party with some of those you love, and use it to proclaim that you refuse to be trapped behind this wall just because of your circumstances. You have every reason to anticipate good things from God in the future!

You’ve taken a major step in beginning the process toward your Faith Breakthrough by completing this assessment. Congratulations on your willingness to begin the exciting journey!
